A Dream of a House

Hillel is a young boy who dreams of building a house for his family. He wants a house with a big yard where he can play with his friends, a garden where his mother can grow vegetables, and a library where his father can read to him. But most of all, Hillel wants a house where his family can be together and happy.

Hillel's family is poor, and they live in a small, cramped apartment. Hillel's parents work hard, but they can't afford to buy a house. Hillel knows that if he wants his dream to come true, he will have to find a way to build it himself.

With the Help of Friends

Hillel starts by talking to his friends about his dream. His friends are all excited to help, and they come up with a plan. They will all work together to collect materials and build the house.

The friends work hard, and they soon have enough materials to start building. They find an empty lot near Hillel's apartment, and they begin to build the house.

The friends work together to lay the foundation, build the walls, and put on the roof. They work hard, but they also have a lot of fun. They sing songs, tell stories, and laugh together.

A House for the Family

After many months of hard work, the house is finally finished. Hillel and his friends are so proud of what they have accomplished. They have built a beautiful house for Hillel's family.

Hillel's family is overjoyed. They can't believe that Hillel and his friends have built them a house. They are so grateful to Hillel and his friends for their hard work and dedication.

Hillel and his family move into the new house, and they are so happy. They have a big yard where they can play, a garden where they can grow vegetables, and a library where they can read. But most of all, they have a house where they can be together and happy.
