History of Irish Paganism

The history of Irish Paganism can be traced back to the ancient Celts, who inhabited Ireland for centuries. The Celts had a complex and sophisticated system of beliefs and practices, which included a pantheon of gods and goddesses, a belief in the Otherworld, and a strong connection to the natural world.

With the arrival of Christianity in Ireland in the 5th century, Irish Paganism began to decline. However, many of the old beliefs and practices continued to survive in folklore and tradition. In the 19th and 20th centuries, there was a revival of interest in Irish Paganism, and today there are many active Pagan communities in Ireland and around the world.

Beliefs of Irish Paganism

Irish Pagans believe in a pantheon of gods and goddesses, who are responsible for different aspects of the natural world and human experience. Some of the most important deities in the Irish pantheon include:

- The Dagda - The father of the gods and the king of the Tuatha Dé Danann
- The Morrígan - A war goddess and the patroness of warriors
- Brigid - A goddess of fire, poetry, and healing
- Lugh - A solar god and the patron of warriors and craftsmen
- Nuada - A god of healing and the patron of physicians

Irish Pagans also believe in the Otherworld, a realm of spirits and ancestors. The Otherworld is often depicted as a beautiful and mysterious place, where time and space have no meaning. It is said that the fairies live in the Otherworld, and that they can sometimes be seen by mortals.

Practices of Irish Paganism

Irish Paganism is a diverse tradition, and there is no one right way to practice it. However, some common practices include:

- Prayer and meditation - Irish Pagans often pray to the gods and goddesses, and they may also meditate on their own connection to the divine.
- Rituals and ceremonies - Irish Pagans celebrate a variety of rituals and ceremonies throughout the year, including the eight festivals of the Celtic calendar.
- Divination - Irish Pagans often use divination to seek guidance from the gods and goddesses. Common methods of divination include tarot cards, runes, and ogham.
- Magic - Irish Pagans believe that magic is a natural part of the world, and they may use it for a variety of purposes, such as healing, protection, and divination.

Deities of Irish Paganism
