- Draft: The draft is the process of selecting players for your fantasy team. Each player in the NFL is assigned a position (e.g., quarterback, running back, wide receiver, etc.), and you must draft a certain number of players at each position to fill out your roster.
- Roster: Your roster is the lineup of players that you have selected for your fantasy team. The size of your roster will vary depending on the league you are playing in.
- Scoring: Players score points based on their performance in real-world football games. The most common scoring system is points per reception (PPR), which awards 1 point for every reception a player makes. Other scoring systems include points per carry (PPC), points per yard (PPY), and touchdowns (TD).
- Waiver wire: The waiver wire is a pool of players who are not currently on any fantasy team. You can add players from the waiver wire to your team if they are available.
- Trade: You can trade players with other teams in your league. Trades can be used to improve your team's strength or to fill a hole in your roster.

Now that you understand the basics of fantasy football, you're ready to start playing. Here are the steps you need to follow:

1. Join a league: The first step is to join a fantasy football league. There are many different types of leagues available, so you can find one that fits your interests and skill level.
2. Draft your team: Once you have joined a league, you will need to draft your team. The draft is the process of selecting players for your fantasy team. You can either draft your team manually or use a draft assistant.

3. Set your lineup: Each week, you will need to set your lineup of players. Your lineup will consist of the players that you think will score the most points for your team.
4. Monitor your team: Once you have set your lineup, you will need to monitor your team's performance throughout the week. You can do this by checking the box scores of the games that your players are playing in.
5. Make roster moves: If you are not happy with the performance of your team, you can make roster moves to improve your team's strength. You can add players from the waiver wire or trade players with other teams in your league.

Now that you know the basics of how to play fantasy football, here are some tips and strategies to help you improve your game:

- Do your research: The key to success in fantasy football is to do your research. You should study the players in the NFL and try to identify which players are likely to perform well. You can use a variety of resources to do your research, such as websites, magazines, and podcasts.
- Draft a balanced team: When you are drafting your team, it is important to draft a balanced team. You should not draft too many players at one position. Instead, you should try to draft a mix of players at different positions.

- Set your lineup wisely: When you are setting your lineup each week, you should consider the matchups that your players have. You should try to start players who have favorable matchups and avoid players who have difficult matchups.
- Make roster moves: If you are not happy with the performance of your team, you should make roster moves to improve your team's strength. You can add players from the waiver wire or trade players with other teams in your league.
- Don't give up: Fantasy football is a long season. There will be weeks when your team performs well and there will be weeks when your team performs poorly. The key is to stay positive and don't give up.

Fantasy football is a great way to have fun and compete with your friends. By following the tips and strategies in this guide, you can improve your game and increase your chances of winning your league.
